A little over a year ago - I received a call at work saying I needed to go to the hospital - they had taken mom.

She was 84, lived in a condo by herself, was mostly blind, but still bowled twice a week.

She was on her way to bowling, but felt unwell, so went back home. Someone found her collapsed in her building's vestibule and called the ambulance.

On my way to the hospital - I was stopped by a train. A long train. There was nothing I could do about it. I kept myself busy and went thru my briefcase. I made a phone call. I put in a new CD. I made another phone call.

The train finally passed and I was able to continue on. At the next red light, I could hear my moms voice say "Theresa, hold my hand." I always had to hold her hand as a little girl, when crossing a street.

I arrived at the hospital a few minutes later... my mom had already passed away and as I held her hand, it was already cold. Had it not been for such a long train - I might have been able to say goodbye.
