2 of all, I vote no. I know that there is
3 no, one spot where I can go vote yes or no,
4 which is interesting.

5 But the thing that
6 bothers me the most is, when I take a look 7 at the graphic sheet that represents the 8 number of increasing trains and decreasing
9 trains, it appears to me that there is only
10 one or two spots in the Chicagoland area
11 that are going to end up with a significant 12 decrease in trains in comparison to the 13 very significant increase in trains that's 14 going to occur in the suburban areas.

15 I wonder if they are,
16 basically, going to say one day in 17 transportation from the north to the south
18 whether this disruption is worth it,
19 because it appears to me, and I'm a
20 physician who does home healthcare and I
21 travel this entire area, that the 22 significant increase in trains is going to 23 be an incredible disruption in the suburban 24 area, particularly -- well, certainly in

1 Barrington, and I certainly know it to be
2 true in Bartlett, where it crosses West
3 Bartlett Road. That's all I have to say.
