Being older and I have seen many changes in the world, but the one constant is our need for land and food, this has never changed. The Great Lakes Basin project would take thousands of acres of PRIME farmland forever out of production and for what? a new railroad that no Class One or Two Railroad has come out and publically supported. The whole GLBT project reminds me of my friends all of whom are retired. So many of them complain about how we have cars that park themselves, vacuum cleaners that are robots, self check out lanes at the store, but these are innovations that are making our world a better place, we need innovation. The GLBT project has no innovation, it is the same old idea proposed by Daniel Burnham. Daniel Burnham died in 1912. Why should we as the public support a project that was proposed in the late 1800's? This project is outdated, unneeded and needs to be denied. We need to look towards the future, not back to the past. We have no idea what the future will bring, but in a world of soon to be self driving cars, I know there is a better solution than a project that was proposed in the 1800's and still has not been built. That fact alone shows how there is no public necessity for this line, please issue an immediate no build ruling.
