I expect there will be a preponderance of Negative Comment concerning the proposed takeover of the EJE by the CNR. People naturally resist any change from the status quo. Those most affected, who live near the tracks or need to cross them often, will object the most. Like those that live near airports that need to expand, and new highways, they are unhappy over these changes, yet should have taken into consideration the possibility that moving near the railroad, airport etc, there could be adverse changes in time to come. I can see the significant improved efficiency that the re-routing of many trains that would be achieved by the takeover and the additional fuel savings that we all would indirectly benefit. I feel the approval of the take-over should be granted. With the stipulation the CNR will within 5 years, install bridges and/or underpasses at several Key grade crossings. Cost for these improvements to be 90% born by the CNR, and the balance 8% by the State and 2% by the Cities.
