Before I could build my home it was necessary for me to hire a surveyor to prove that where I was going to build was not in the 100 year flood plain as drawn by FEMA. Which I already knew it was not. $1000+ later ~~and several months~~ I was allowed to build without having to purchase flood insurance. That was 12 years ago and despite a lot of flooding to the immediate north of me my property stays dry. Now you want to run a railroad through there. What happened to the rule about not building in the flood plain? ^{and what happens when the next map gets drawn by FEMA?}

NOTE: When an individual chooses to submit an Environmental Comment or some Other Submissions, his or her personal contact information is considered public information and is shared within and outside of STB without additional authorization.
