

Dear Mr. Navecky;

I am writing to protest the proposed Great Lake Basin railroad. Aside from the worry of having the peace and quiet all of my fellow country dwellers and I hold sacred completely destroyed, there are practical matters these trains would disrupt. Soil drainage is fragile and I have seen small changes in the lay of the land disturb where the water runs and how it localizes and collects causing problems in fields and flooding in buildings. Standing water can cause the destruction of wildlife habitats. Enjoying wild animals, whether in hunting or just watching them is another aspect of living in the country this project threatens to ruin. Leave the country alone and find a more commercial place to build the railroad. Don't let some corporation come into our community, disrupt our lives and lower our land values for their own profit.

Sincerely,

James Brownlee
